CHALLENGES

1. Read a book published the same year you were born.

Get in a time capsule and read a book that reflects the culture, views, and lifestyle of the era of your birth. Tip: Google search best seller list [year].

2. Read a book recommended on a blog.

Check out any book blog for a reading suggestion with some buzz.

3. Read a book that has been made into a movie.

Discover which of your favorite scenes from a book ended up on the cutting room floor, and which made it to the silver screen.

4. Reread your favorite book from childhood.

What book kept you up reading under your covers with a flashlight? Read it again and see if it holds up.

❑ 5. Read a book published in another country.

Some of the greatest literary achievements are works that have been written outside the USA. Eat locally, read globally.

❑ 6. Read that classic you never read.

Maybe you got away with reading a summary, or watching the movie so you could pass a quiz. Now's your chance to finally read the whole thing!

❑ 7. Read a book you found on NoveList (or GoodReads or LibraryThing).

See what great book you can discover, using these valuable online reading tools.

❑ 8. Read a genre or format you don't usually read.

Do you avoid graphic novels, audio books, or a particular genre? Pick up a book completely different from your standard choice and find out if it is worse (or better!) than you thought.

❑ 9. Read a book from another viewpoint.

Everyone is entitled to an opinion, so read a book whose author has one totally different from your own.

❑ 10. Read a selection from a local book club.

Check out what your neighbors are reading and discussing over cookies and coffee, and perhaps join them!

❑ 11. Read an award winner.

Read a book that won any national or international book award.

❑ 12. Read someone else's favorite book.

Ask somebody you know to identify their favorite book, then pick it up to find out why they love it.
